The Center for Teaching Excellence presents:

ORSP 102: The Pre-Award Process

November 12, 2009

10:00-11:30 a.m

Wells Conference Rm 2

This is the second in a five part series of workshops designed to provide both new and established researchers an introduction (or refresher) to the process of securing and managing extramural funding and to the services provided by the Office of Research & Sponsored Programs (ORSP).

In this workshop, researchers will learn where to find funding, how to develop an idea into a viable grant opportunity, the required elements of a grant proposal, and how to prepare their proposal for submission.

Detailed discussion will include budget preparation, protocols for using human and/or animal subjects in research, intellectual property, staffing, subcontracting, indirect versus direct costs, obtaining approvals through the Proposal Automatic Routing System (PARS), and e-submissions to funding agencies.

Who should attend? New faculty and researchers who are developing their extramurally funded research programs, as well as established faculty and researchers and their support staff in need of a refresher on the Pre-Award process.
